CT 6141 Academic Foundations: Academic Writing and Scholarship

Explore an Integral approach to developing your voice and honing your craft

(optional 1 or 2 units) 8 Mondays, 3–6pm,

September 11th – October 2nd & October 30th – November 11th.

The art of writing well does not emerge in a flash of inspiration, but it is the fruit of the hard work involved in the drafting and revision process, and in collaboration with peers. In graduate school this craft can be honed. This honing benefits the professional development of students and helps them learn to communicate effectively and clearly through the written word.

This course has been designed to de-mystify academic writing in English in a safe, supportive, and rigorous workshop environment, and it will meet the needs of anyone who wants to learn to write more effectively. This course will also be an opportunity for students to complete a substantial writing project related to their own scholarly work and receive feedback on sections and entire drafts over the course of the semester from the professors and fellow students.

Academic writing skills will be developed on four tracks:

- as a writer (journals, strategies for writer's block, getting organized, etc.),
- in community (peer review and response)
- language (words, sentences, paragraphs, style, voice)
- & discipline (e.g., anthropology, philosophy, women's spirituality).
